Asking for Gifts

Should I be asking for money right now? YES

- The work we do is vitally important to help our nation's most vulnerable children and youth through unprecedented times
- Philanthropy brings joy to donors
- Focus on the fundamentals of fundraising
- Embrace opportunities to be creative and think differently about how you fundraise
- Consider creating a COVID Relief Fund

Virtual Fundraising Events

Options for Events

If your organization relies on an in-person event, there are four main options at this time:

- Use the power of technology and online fundraising tools to host a “virtual’ event

Go Virtual

- Cancel the physical event but not the fundraising. Reach out to your donors and ask for their support.

Cancel

- Intent is to hold the event in-person in the future, but the date/time is not yet confirmed. Adds some uncertainty.

Postpone

- New date/time has already been set. This also adds an some uncertainty as it could change again.

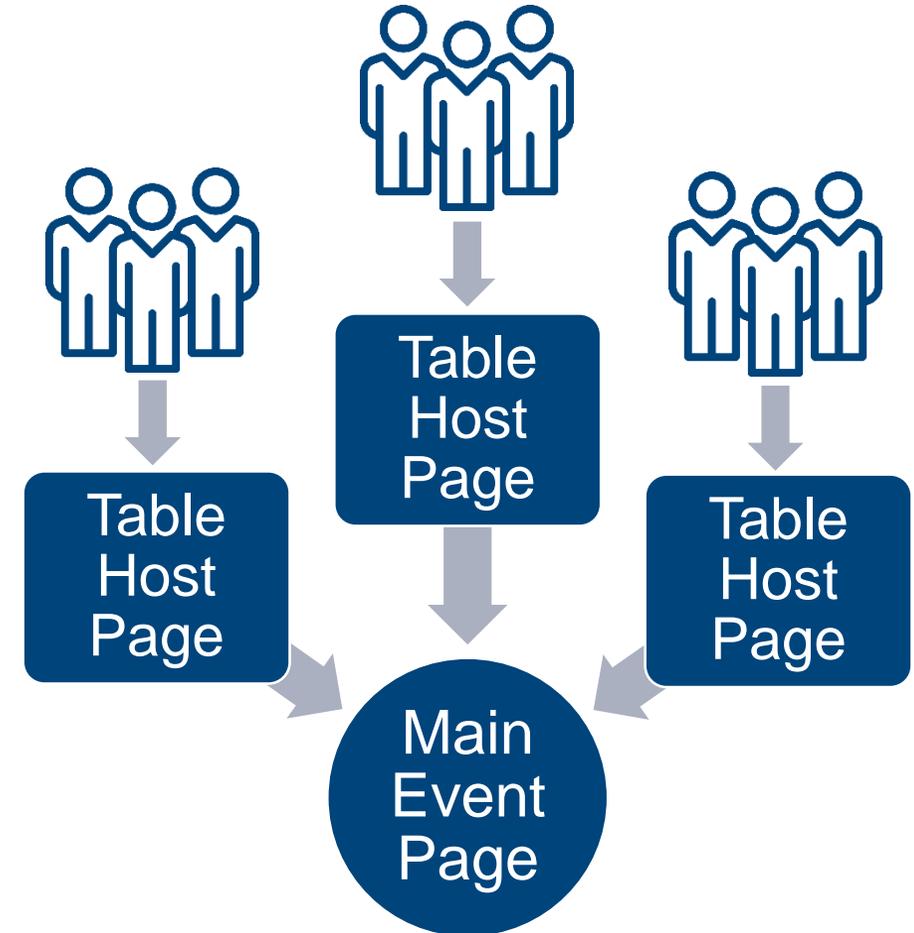

Reschedule

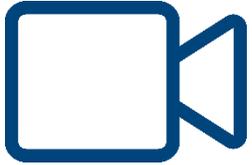

You can use a Peer-to-Peer online fundraising campaign to create a virtual gala, complete with virtual table hosts. This also applies to breakfast and luncheon events.

- You create and manage the main campaign page for the overall virtual event.
- Your table hosts create their own fundraising pages (virtual tables).
- Table hosts reach out to the people who would have attended at their tables – and potentially many more! – to raise funds for the event.
- General donations can be made straight to the main event page.

Virtual Gala

Virtual Gala

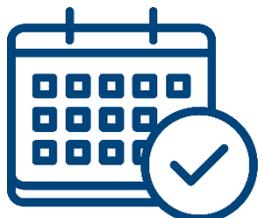

Incorporate video or livestreaming as part of the virtual gala to amplify the event experience. This could be done through whatever platform you are using for volunteer engagement or training.

Support your table hosts by updating your table host packet with guidance on peer-to-peer campaigns – how to set up a fundraising page (virtual table), templates for email and social media, etc.

Reach out to your sponsors to identify the new recognition and engagement opportunities presented by going virtual that they are most excited about. Ask your board and table hosts to thank sponsors through social media.

Make it a multi-day event. You are no longer limited by meal times. Celebrate different aspects of your work on different days with daily reminders via email and social media of the opportunities to engage throughout the week or weekend.

Online Auctions

If your major annual event is an auction, this may be the year to consider a different type of event format that focuses more on relationship-based fundraising and has less financial risk.

If you hold an online auction, consider reducing the number of items and focusing on those with the greatest potential return.

Cultivation Events

Technology can also help create one-to-one or one-to-many experiences that help cultivate and deepen relationships with donors and funders.

- Virtual face-to-face meetings
- Hold a phone or virtual “town hall” to share updates
- Share videos, photos or stories from volunteers about why this work is so important right now (website, social media, donation pages, email)
- Leverage social media channels
- ThankView – personalized video app

REAL TALK: COVID-19 & 2020 Fundraising. Presented by Ariel Glassman and Talia Silveri Wright, this webinar offered hands-on, practical advice for how to pivot from an in-person event to a virtual event, as well as other “real talk” and suggestions for fundraising during the health crisis.

Virtual Gala Example: Upaya Social Ventures is a nonprofit in Seattle, WA that decided to change their annual in-person gala to a virtual gala with tremendous fundraising success. Check out their virtual gala page at <https://give.upayasv.org/campaign/upayas-virtual-gala/c275115>.

Communique Conference offers this helpful resource for pivoting to virtual events:

Major Donors

Connect with Your Donors

Now is the perfect time to call your major donors. Most of them are at home and more are interested in having calls that help connect them to people and causes outside their home. These are not solicitation calls. These are “check in” calls to see how your key supporters are doing during this time.

Consider engaging your board. This is a great way for the board member to feel like they are doing something to help your organization while helping your donors feel heard and valued. Plus, research shows that donors who receive calls from board members give more frequently and give more money.

- Assign each board member with 3-5 donors to call.
- Prep your board member by giving them basic information about the donor and general guidance on how to structure the call.

Foundations

Foundation Fundraising

- Update your case for support to describe your role in this pandemic
 - Effect of the pandemic on children and families
 - How your organization and volunteers have stepped up and adapted
 - What your program need funds for right now and how it will help children and youth
- Create a space on your website for your COVID case for support and stories of impact
- Check in with your current and prospective funders to provide an organizational update
- Consider asking current funders if a restricted grant could become general operating, or if they are offering any emergency grant funds
- Look to see if any local foundations or corporations are offering COVID funds or doing something new/more to help vulnerable communities
- Schedule meetings and submit proposals!
